Bridal Party Enterinaed.

Principal among the events of this week in Macon, Ga., will be the wedding of Miss Turpin and William Taylor Dabney, of Richmond, occuring at Christ Church on Wednesday. This will be preceded this evening by a dance at the Idle Hour Country Club to be given by Walter Turpin. A buffet supper to the bridal party only by the father of the groom at the Hotel Deupsey, was held hast night.

Miss Turpin, bride-elect, was the honoree at a luncheon given Saturday by Miss Helen Wimberly. Three tables of players were invited to meet the guest of honor, including the bridal party and a few intimate friends.

Roses in several shades and Easter lilies were used for decorating the living-room, where the girls played an interesting game. Silk hose were given to both the highest scorer and to Miss Turpin.

Luncheon was served at a table pret-

Pienie Saturday.

A charming affair of Saturday was the picnic given by Miss Dorothy Smith, a student of Richmond College, at her home near Bon Air. Returning to Bon Air, the party was entertained at a lawn supper at the residence of Dr. Charles M. Hazen. The guests of Miss Smith for the day included Misses Dietz, Shine, Johnson, James, Clendon, Smith Woodson's Messrs. Newton Taliaferro, Perdue Anderson, Bagby, Gliman, Richardson, Boyd and Webster. The Misses Hazen chaperoned the affair.

Visiting Here.

Mrs. Clyde Harold Slease and her small daughters, Virginia and Lillian Janet Slease, arrived here Saturday from Mismi, Fia., where they have been spending the winter season. Mrs. Slease and her children will be guests of the former's sister, Mrs. J. G. Carter, at her home, 2329 Floyd Avenue, for a month before returning to New York City.

New York, April 20.—Thomas A.
Edison returned to-day from a threemonths' vacation, spent with John Burroughs, the naturalist, and Henry
Ford, the philanthropic automobile manufacturer. He celebrated his return in two ways— by working twelve hours in his factory at Liewelyn Park,
N. J., and by giving an interview.

Mr. Edison declares that:

He favors a grape-juice policy for the United States navy.

Believes that universal disarmament may be possible in 1,000 years.

But for the rest, the play and the performance are thoroughly delightful. Bright, keen lines abound; a bit of satire is injected in the person of a poet—a very minor poet—with aestheticism exuding from him; several extremely amusing characters are written into the story, if it may be called a story, rather than a fantasy, and Miss Barrymore and her company make every possible point.

Charles Cherry, a star in his own right, is, like Bruce McRae and very few others, able to appear natural and altogether likable; E. Henry Edwards handles skilfully the easily overdone role of the poet; William Ingersoil, a favorite leading man in the old days of Mr. Giffen's stock hore, gives a conspicuously good performance in a German character part; Haidee Wright is wonderfully clever as a worshiper and hanger-on; Elleen Van Blene is an appealing young girl, and Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, the most distinguished "old woman" of the American stage, is the same fine old artist that she has always been.

In a word: the play is a most diverting comedy; Miss Barrymore again a finished comedienne, rather than an emotional actress, and her supporting company is without a flaw.

There will be one more performance to-night.

Wait for Lyric's Closer.

It is the closer that makes the Lyric's headline act this week extend itself in order to retain its place in the lead; the other acts, compared with these two, merely also rim.

Taylor Granville and Laura Pierpont and their company in "The System" constitute the featured act. The System" sa melodramatic sketch in three scenes based upon the underworld theme that has been treated in "The Deep Purple," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "Within the Law" and dozens of others. Or course, the title is derived from the situation, or supposed situation, in the police department of New York, where "frame-ups," by which innocent men are condemned, are presumed to be of daily occurrence.

The first and third scenes of this sketch are genuine thrillers, while the second, thresome as it is, is necessary in order to permit of a change of setting. Thieves argot, police patter and the slang of the streets are handled with understanding and employed amusingly, and the dialogue, for the most part, is natural and not overdrawn. Taylor Granville, as the crook, Laura Pierpont, as his girl, and Clifford Dempsey, as the plainclothes man, are all satisfactory enough, though they all overplay, but the part of the police inspector is raised by the man to whom it is assigned, while the reporters are simply a joke.

Billed simply as "Funsters," the Stan Stanley Trio abundantly justifies the description. Except for their exceptionally good bounding work, the success of the act depends so largely upon a certain element of surprise that its nature will not be disclosed. The star of the trio is that rare bird—a first-class acrobat, who is also an irresistible comedian. Free Stone stands alone in this line, but this man is "immense."

Fast and skilfful cycling is exhibited by the Heuman Trio, with which the bill opens; rough-neck songs and coarse comedy are provided by Jimmy Lacas, whose coarseness grew, yesterday afternoon, until an element applauded him rapturous the girl, and ebuiltions of that character are not commed to artists or temperamentalists. That she constantly poses is the one indication of abnormality that is clearly and consistently given throughout the play, and this side of the character is also clearly consistently and artistically sustained by Miss Barrymore.

But for the rest, the play and the performance are thoroughly delightful.
